

High Impact Environmental Training

At Xodus we believe training is all about delivering competence – a combination of knowledge, practical experience, motivation, attitude and behaviour.

People who attend Xodus training courses emerge capable and energised, and will return to their operations with the ability and motivation to improve that operation's performance.

A range of training

Xodus offers a range of training types, including established and accredited training courses as well as client specific programmes targeted at particular issues, individuals and teams. As well as classroom-based sessions, we offer e-learning packages (with our partners Atlas Interactive) and highly practical on-site coaching. Training we offer includes:

- › Senior management briefings and motivational sessions
- › General raising of environmental awareness
- › On-site coaching (hazard and operation-specific)
- › Internal Environmental Management System Auditor (3 day) – IEMA accredited
- › E-learning based Environmental Management for the Oil and Gas Industry – IEMA accredited
- › Chemical management for the offshore oil and gas industry
- › Achieving compliance with environmental legislation
- › Environmental Impact Assessment
- › PON (Petroleum Operations Notice) compliance
- › EHS management system auditing

- › Waste management and the Duty of Care
- › Environmental Representative training.

What makes Xodus training so effective?

We believe competence and motivation can only be delivered by an experienced and active practitioner in the field. All our trainers work actively in their particular field as consultants, as well as being skilled trainers. We also believe training should be practical and engaging, drawing upon real life examples and using exercises where possible in favour of lecture-style teaching.

IEMA accreditation

Achieving IEMA accreditation for any course is a rigorous and searching process, requiring significant investment and preparation.

Attendees of IEMA accredited courses can be assured that the course contains industry-recognised content and that trainers have been externally assessed. That said, not all IEMA accredited courses are the same, and we view the IEMA accreditation as a minimum standard. Attendance of an IEMA accredited course provides delegates with points towards continuing professional development.
